Who we are and what we do

All across Chicagoland there is a growing community of adult allies who are dedicated to supporting girls and young women as they identify and strengthen their personal and collective power. The Chicago Girls' Coalition (CGC) exists to build upon the strengths of the girl-serving community by convening trainings, creating community gatherings, advocating on the behalf of and with young women, and centralizing resources on gender specific projects, programs and issues. The Chicago Girls' Coalition stands with and for girls and their allies to foster ALL girls' development and community engagement.

Join us and find the support you need in your girl-centered work.

Why your voice matters

Gender specific spaces are often rare and powerful places in girl's and young women's lives. Spaces which welcome the "whole" girl including her gender, sexual orientation, race, socio-economic class, abilities and disabilities are vital to each girl's identity formation and they lay the foundations for social change. These spaces are one of the few places girls have access to authentic power where they can practice leadership and decision making skills. In order for adults to be true allies in constructing and maintaining these safe spaces they must continue to develop their skills, check their adult privilege and authority, deepen their wisdom and be connected to their community.
